ELECTRICAL ADAPTATION.

The uses for electricity have been by no means all discovered. It is not only an agency for communication of ideas, for artificial light and a motor for propulsion, as well as a most useful agent in the laboratory and the shop for a variety of purposes, but is being daily adapted to ends that a very few months ago would have been deemed all but impossible. Thus it has, in its form of light, been introduced into the cavity of the body for the revealment to human sight of the condition of the stomach, the throat, and of even some of the most concealed of internal organs. New applications of this agent are constantly being made in surgery, in which it has long been used as an aid in excision and for other purposes, and now we have news of its adaptation in a very simple form as a portable light for the examination of wounds on the field of battle, or for the examination of persons found prostrate at night by police patrols. The device is that of a small electric hand-lamp to be used as a search light. This lamp, with its miniature battery attached, is strapped to the breast of the searcher, and throws a strong and penetrating light across a wide area. The object found, the light of the lamp is ample to enable the surgeon or the patrolmen to do preliminary bandaging, and to ascertain just what is the condition of the patient, thus enabling his removal to be more intelligently and safely made. An advantage of this lamp is that it can be held very close to the patient without affecting him, the heat being imperceptible, and there being, of course, no odor.

Still another new appliance is the machine for felling trees by electricity. The device is one of saws or augurs operated from a cart on which an electrical motor is placed that is energized through wires leading into the forest from the seat of power. Great economy is thus secured, because the motor is light and can be wheeled close to the tree, and made to penetrate forests where a steam engine could scarcely be taken.

Besides, without moving the power plant, a wide area can be cleared with tenfold greater rapidity than by any other method known.

TWO NEGROES OF South Carolina lynched a white man who criminally and fatally assaulted a colored girl, their near relative. The negroes were tried and condemned to death for murder, and their crime certainly was murder. But American civilization has set up a code of law that overrides the written law, inweigh against it as we may, and it reads and heread for a century that the American who kills another who criminally assaults one of the women of his household, shall not suffer the death of the murderer. Right or wrong, such is the decree of American sentiment outside of the Courts, and to this time there has not been a Court that has been able to defeat it. Juries will not render verdicts of guilty in such cases, and in many of them not even an arrest can be effected. Now the negro lynchings of South Carolina, who followed the example of the white man has set them, had a right to expect treatment at the hands of the South Carolina society. They counted, however, without consideration of the color of their skins. It is one thing for a white man to criminally assault a colored woman evidently, and quite another when a negro assails a white woman. In the latter case there is a short shrift for the offender, and the Courts are troubled very little with his case. In the former a trial is sure to follow, if at all, that results, under the law's delays, in the aquittal of the assailant, or his punishment with less severity than the gallows inflicts. But whether this conclusion is sound and justified or not, we do know that the two negroes referred to, who employed the white man's weapon, and the white man's method, were condemned to death, a fate no white avenger of woman's honor ever meets in the South, or for that matter anywhere else in this country. A chivalrous Governor, however, has taken a very different view of the case, and has interposed the Executive arm and pardoned the negroes. In so doing Governor Richardson has brought upon himself the wrath of South Carolina society, and political damnation as well, since the party to which he has adhered has already given the Governor clearly to understand that the man who pardons a "nigger" cannot again receive the nomination of the Democratic party.

SAN FRANCISCO has made arrangements upon a very respectable scale for the proper observance of centenary anniversary that occurs next week. It is about the only place in the State, we believe, where there will be any special celebration. But the people ought, in honor of this, the last of our great centennials, to arrange for a complete suspension of business on the appointed day, and for extensive decorations of their residences with national colors. The American flag on that day should be floated over homes in the land, and every intelligent adult should make it his business to impress upon the mind of youth under his control or influence the thought of the hour, and to make especially clear to all such the reason the day is observed as a holiday, and what is the patriotic and duty-teaching lesson of the occasion.

It is to be hoped that the interior press will thus call the attention of each other to the Press Convention to be held in this city on the 20th of May, that there may be awakened the interest in the matter that its importance deserves, and the result be a large attendance. The new association will on that occasion complete its organization, and there is reason for its being strong, thorough and compensating.

About the only interest in the interior that is not working in harmony with itself is that of the press. There are social and helpful factors in the branch of the organization, that if improved, will result beneficially to the press and the reading public. For this reason, if for no other, we desire to see the Association succeed in the scheme its founders laid out, and there is seen at this time no reason why it should not.

SURGEON-GENERAL HAMILTON frankly admits that he fears another outbreak of yellow fever in Florida the coming summer. There will always exist the liability of the scourge reappearing for two or three successive seasons in a section where it has been severe in the preceding year, so long as the practice of burying the victims of the plague is adhered to. There is but one proper method of disposing of the bodies of those who die of the fever, and that is by cremation. Brazil demonstrated seven years ago that the burial of the victims results in the cultivation of the bacteria in the grave earth, and that the microbes for several seasons will flourish in the fever cemetery, and are the most potent agents for the renewal of epidemics and their maintenance.

THE OLD-TIME PAYNE OKLAHOMA boomers were for the most part outrun in the race for the promised land, and as a result the vengeance they threatened against any who dared to settle on the lands that they claimed should be reserved for their coming has found expression in the murder of a boy who took up a tract of land that he found unoccupied and unclaimed. These Payne men will meet the fate that ever follows title acquired through blood. They mistake the temper of their own countrymen if they imagine for a moment that they will be permitted to terrorize their new territory.

AND now it is Wisconsin that adopts the Australian system of ballooning. That California rejected it last winter at the dictation of influences that have no room for fair elections and honest contests stands to her shame, and as State after State now adopts the reform system it becomes the more conspicuous. The cause that led to the adoption of the scheme in Wisconsin was the complete success of the system in the municipal election of Milwaukee, the chief city of that State.

BOULANGER'S departure from Brussels was in no wise romantic. It was a gloomy, chilly and, indeed, frigid embarkation. A prominent theatrical light would have created more interest in departing from Brussels than Boulanger awakened. Eventually in that section of Europe the hero of an unaccomplished revolution is not regarded with much respect.

PORTLAND ITEMS.

Opposition to the Portorix Bills, the Cause of Competition.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 25th.—The recent action of the California Fruit Union in opposing Portland's bill of Chicago, and the Union at that point, has resulted in more trouble for the organization. Last season another Chicago firm acted as the Union's agents and auctioneers, and when it came to market it had been given the cold shoulder by the union, this having immediately proceeded to organize another Fruit Union in this city in opposition to the old organization. It will be known as the Pacific Fruit Union, and will compete with California Fruit Union is recognized as the leading fruit shipper from this city, yet the company is confident that it will do an extensive business in direct opposition to the former organization. Arrangements have already been made to have 500 carloads of California fruits, which is over one-half of the amount sold last year through the California Fruit Union. About 1,000 carloads are expected to come under the new arrangement.
